PENRHYN QUARRY

A PROUD HISTORY AND AN AMAZING STORY

The Penrhyn Quarry site is a former slate quarry, and the first reference to slate extraction at Penrhyn is from 1570, when the quarry is mentioned in a Welsh poem.

At the end of the nineteenth century, it was the world's largest slate quarry; the main pit was nearly 1 mile (1.6 km) long and 1,200 feet (370 metres) deep, and it was worked by nearly 3,000 quarrymen.

The Blondin Restaurant name celebrates the development of innovative equipment in Welsh slate quarrying history and the links to today's Velocity adventure at Penrhyn Quarry. 'The Blondin' was a type of aerial ropeway developed to transport slate in open quarries in North Wales, named after the 18th century tightrope walker Charles Blondin. Examples of these were used throughout Penrhyn Quarry with the nickname of 'Jerry Ms'.
